Joe Stein built this four-story showplace in 1917 and named it for his young son, Irving, who lived with his parents in a second-story apartment. As downtown trains disappeared and more convenient highway motels sprang up along the edge of town, the Hotel Irving fell into disuse and disrepair. It was a forlorn shell when Viking Range Corporation purchased it in 2000. Extensive renovations transformed the old hotel into the renowned Alluvian, the Delta's first boutique hotel. A world-class hotel which was named to Conde Nast's Gold List three years in a row and frequently named a AAA Four Diamond Hotel.

Tallahatchie Flats

For a more rustic, adventurous, and private experience, rent your own house at Tallahatchie Flats. On the banks of the Tallahatchie River, just two miles up Money Road from Greenwood. A row of relocated sharecropper shacks welcomes visitors with surprisingly comfortable interiors, surrounded by cotton fields and the sounds of Delta wildlife. A renovated commissary features occasional musical entertainment and is available to rent for parties and reunions. Steps away from Robert Johnson's final resting place and just a few miles from noteworthy Civil Rights site, Bryant's Grocery, located in Money.

Dining Options

If you leave Greenwood hungry, you have only yourself to blame. Fan and Johnny's chef is a James Beard Award semifinalist for Best Chef South, and the Ballas family has been rolling comfort food and world-famous mile-high pies out of the Crystal Grill's kitchen for three-quarters of a century. Giardina's and Lusco's feature upscale evening dining choices that range from pompano to porterhouse and Jeem's Diner boasts the best burger in the Delta and homemade biscuits for breakfast. If you are looking for an ethnic treat, try the 100 year old family recipe egg rolls at Mai Little China on Park Avenue or the Pico de Gallo at San Miguel Taqueria. Turnrow Book Co's upstairs cafe is the place to go for lunchtime soups, salads and sandwiches, and Webster's is a cozy neighborhood spot just across the Keesler Bridge in North Greenwood. Other culinary temptations range from Serio's open-face meatball sandwich to Veronica's intricate cakes and treats to Steven's barbecue brisket and famous chocolate cake.
